1. BASIC RISKS INVOLVED IN TRADING

1.1 Risk of Higher Volatility: Volatility refers to the dynamic changes in price that securities undergo when trading activity continues whether listed or unlisted. Generally, higher the volatility of a security, the greater is its price swings. There may be normally greater volatility in thinly traded securities than in active securities. As a result of volatility, your price at which your order is executed may substantially change thereafter, resulting in notional or real losses.

1.2 Risk of Lower Liquidity: Liquidity refers to the ability of market participants to buy and/or sell securities expeditiously at a competitive price and with minimal price difference. Generally, it is assumed that more the numbers of orders available in a market, greater is the liquidity. Liquidity is important because with greater liquidity, it is easier for investors to buy and/or sell securities, and as a result, investors are more likely to pay or receive a competitive price for securities purchased or sold. There may be a risk of lower liquidity in some securities as compared to active securities. As a result, your order may only be partially executed, or may be executed with relatively greater price difference or may not be executed at all.

1.3 Risk of News Announcements: Issuers and blogs make announcements that may impact the price of the securities. These statements may occur during trading, and when combined with lower liquidity and higher volatility, may suddenly cause an unexpected positive or negative movement in the price of the security.

1.4 Risk of Rumors: Rumors about companies at times float in the market through word of mouth, newspapers, websites or news agencies, etc. The investors should be wary of and should desist from acting on rumors.

1.5 System Risk: High volume trading will frequently occur at the market opening and before market close. Such high volumes may also occur at any point in the day. These may cause delays in order execution or confirmation.

1.5.1 During periods of volatility, on account of market participants continuously modifying their order quantity or prices or placing fresh orders, there may be delays in order execution and its confirmations.

1.5.2 Under certain market conditions, it may be difficult or impossible to liquidate a position in the market at a reasonable price or at all, when there are no outstanding orders either on the buy or sell side, or if trading is halted in a security due to any action on account of unusual trading activity or for any other reason.
